Confessions of a First Time Ride Manager

By Laura Harvey

It seemed like a good idea at the time. I can't even say what prompted me to volunteer, but I suspect it was guilt. It hadn't escaped my attention that the rides I enjoyed so much took a lot of work—and so far, I'd done little except reap the benefits. I knew the story of the Little Red Hen; time to suck it up and share the work. But... I didn't know anything about managing a ride. I didn't even know NATRC existed four years ago. I rode in Novice. Surely such things were better left in more experienced hands?

Well, if I could move to Japan for a year simply because it seemed like a good idea, surely I could manage a ride when I had experienced, resourceful mentors to guide me. All ride managers were first-timers once; they got it done. Why shouldn't I?

For months all seemed well. I had a previous year's entry form to use as a model. The ride's previous manager, Helen Steenman, agreed to be trail master. I shamelessly stole Betty Young to be my secretary. I secured my judges, volunteers, P&R captains, point and safety riders, and food chair. Helen already had all the awards from the previous year, when the ride had been canceled at the last minute. The sanction paper-work, insurance, and CDFA drug registration was painless.

I even had a good deal of success rounding up donations for a raffle. From attending previous rides and talking with other ride chairs, I learned that holding a raffle often made the difference between breaking even and ending up in the red. Unfortunately, this meant I had to request donations, possibly my most loathed activity. I'm not a salesperson. I hate asking for things—money, signatures, donations... I'm not very good at it, and it always requires a serious mental pep-talk. However, as there was no one else, I put on my best smile and “hey, horse folk! Let's help other horse folk!” attitude. To my surprise, almost everyone I talked to was not only receptive, but I usually left with a donation.

By June, almost everything was in place and I was petrified. This was too easy. Ride managers always looked harried—even panicked—at rides; where was the harry and the panic?

And then, my careful plans started to unravel. My horsemanship judge couldn't make the ride. My meal chairperson fell seriously ill. We only had half the ribbons we needed for awards. As I worked out the “master plan” (who is supposed to be where, when, and how they get there), I realized my judges would need a jet plane to get to chosen observation points on the trail. The Robbers Fire started burning the neighboring county to the ground. My trail master missed picking up the water troughs because her tenant dropped a tree on the trailer he rented, took an axe to her water tanks, and assaulted her husband. The submersible pump I'd planned to use to draft water from a nearby stream to fill the horse troughs wasn't available.

Ah, Harry and Panic. We meet at last.

We played musical Chairs. The Rules Interpreter became the horsemanship judge. The P&R Captain became the Rules Interpreter. Two unsuspecting husbands became the P&R Captain and Water Master. My meal chairperson rose

Chairman's Corner

As I write this, most of us are preparing for the Holidays and wondering why the heck good old Saint Nicholas chose reindeer rather than sure-footed trail horses. Obviously he never consulted with competitive trail riders prior to the purchase of his team! I do hope that whichever Holiday you and your family celebrated, it was filled with joy and many wonderful memories.

Just a few words of moral support as you slog through the muddy, cold days. Be fortified by the knowledge that another great ride season will soon be upon us come spring. The ride schedule is shaping up (there is a possible NEW ride for 2013!) as well as the Region 1 convention March 9th in Livermore.

If you didn't receive EVERYTHING on your list, bring the list to convention in March and support the convention vendors. I am soliciting everyone's help to advertise the March 9th convention at the Bothwell Art Center in Livermore. There is more information in the convention article in this Leadline. This year's convention will explore the concept of Total Horse Care. Last year, the U.C. Davis Horse Report discussed the incorporation of alternative medicine into their veterinary curriculum. Veterinary student training now includes study in dentistry, chiropractic and acupuncture in addition to the traditional curriculum.

Many of us already utilize alternative treatments along with traditional veterinary treatments and it's great that UC Davis has opted to introduce these tools into the vet student's skill set. Dr. Sarah le Jeune from U.C. Davis will be one of our speakers and will speak about the changes in veterinary training there.

I'd like to remind members that there will be a short member meeting in the afternoon at convention. This is an opportunity to discuss and ask questions regarding the rule changes that were voted on this past year by our Region One National Representatives. Rule changes were presented in Leadline and on the website. Be sure to update yourself prior to ride season and bring questions to Convention or e-mail your representatives. It's important that members be involved and this is your chance to talk to your National Representatives as well as Board of Director members.

Please remember we represent YOU - all of YOU - but if you don't discuss your ideas and suggestions, then we can't truly represent the members. So be actively involved. The organization is only as good as we make it!

I want to express my sincere thanks to those of you who stepped up to the plate and helped manage rides or worked the rides in any capacity. And a truly heartfelt THANK YOU to the VETS who have supported us! This is truly a sport made possible by an army of volunteers and we would not be able to enjoy the scenery, camaraderie and trails without all of you!

So fellow riders, hang in there. The rain will be gone in a few months and we'll see you back on the trails. Stay dry, have a safe winter and I'll see you all March 9th at convention. Happy Trails All!

from the dead. More award ribbons arrived. Home Depot rented me a submersible pump. Scores of intrepid fire-fighters put out the forest fire.

Friday morning dawned beautiful and clear. My dad and I started ferrying things to the ride site. My rock god of a secretary, Betty Young, arrived. Signs were posted, tables set out, rider packets readied, vet-in site chosen and raked clear of pine needles. We were ready.

I was hair-pulling, heart-seizing, terrified. I obsessed over details. When would the water troughs arrive? When would my Water Master arrive? How long would it take us to draft water from the stream? Was there enough water on the trail? What if I got us lost? What if someone needed me in camp while I was gone? What if—

What if I poured out my coffee and drank water instead? I fetched myself a bottled water and sat down in my camp chair to socialize for a few minutes and pull myself together.

Then the calls started. Two riders canceled, and so did the two volunteers coming with them. My safety riders canceled; both of their horses had come up lame. Two riders were caught in terrible traffic and wouldn't arrive until very late. Several volunteers simply never showed up.

By Friday night, my P&R crew consisted of two people. I didn't have any crossing guards for the busy Wentworth Springs Road crossing. I threw myself on the mercy of my point riders and asked them to ride safety instead (and hoped no one had messed with the flagging). I begged Neil Webber and my dad to be crossing guards. A new rider's husband and son volunteered.

To my surprise, everyone else seemed largely unaware of my barely concealed state of terror. At the potluck, everyone even seemed to be having a good time.

On Saturday morning, I piled the horsemanship judge, his secretary, and the Rules Interpreter into my car and led the caravan to the first observation point, then waved the P&R crew on with specific directions.

My job during the ride itself was to drive the horsemanship judge from point to point. To my surprise, being out on the trail was the most relaxing part of the ride. Suddenly, time slowed to normal speed. I had time to sit down. I finished scarfing down my breakfast. I set out my chair and chatted. I readied my camera and waited for the first horses and riders.

By the second obstacle / observation, I felt reasonably calm. The distance between riders stretched out, so we had to scramble to get to the third obstacle/observation ahead of the first riders, but we made it. I had just sat back with a cold bottle of tea when my cell rang.

"We have two lost riders," Josette, one of my safety riders, said. "What do you want us to do?"

She was asking me? I didn't know. Shouldn't she ask the ride manager? Wait, I am the ride manager. *&^%#! I tried to think. This was not covered in the Ride Management manual. What would a ride manager do?

"Uh, stay in camp for right now and let your horses rest," I said. "I'll call Helen and the Forest Service. If the riders don't show up by the time you finish lunch, start back-tracking on the trail to see if you can find them."

I hung up and called Helen, who called the Forest Service, who called me. We reconnoitered and the search began. In the meantime, I waited while the horses came through the last obstacle and tried not to think of all the things that could befall a horse and rider on the trail. What if one of them was seriously injured? If so, how long would it take us to find them? What portions of the trail were the least accessible to emergency vehicles? How long would it even take emergency vehicles to get to us? Was there a heli-pad in the area? Could—

Music blasted from my pocket. I fumbled my cell phone open to hear the riders had just arrived in camp—lost and hungry, but safe and sound. I resolved to buy both of them a compass.

The last of the riders completed the third observation, and we loaded up. After dropping off the judge, his secretary, and the Rules Interpreter, I hustled off to retrieve road signs. By the time I got back, most of the horses had timed in, check-back was getting under way, and our camp cook was firing up his stove. I unpacked the raffle and award loot.

The rest of the ride passed in a bit of a haze, albeit a relieved/happy one. Everyone seemed to have enjoyed themselves, dinner was delicious, and it appeared I hadn't forgotten anything so crucial the ride would be wrecked forever. I even uttered the words: "Next year..."

During the ride, one of the other ride managers characterized ride managing in words I will never forget. I won't repeat them for fear of scaring off any future potential ride managers. In essence, managing is unpleasant. It is hair-tearing, nerve-wracking, heart-palpitating madness. Yet, still we do it. Even more amazing, some of us do it repeatedly. It leaves me wondering if managing a ride isn't a little like childbirth: intense, painful insanity, followed by sheer, giddy relief at having survived the ordeal, followed by a kind of hazy forgetfulness. Sure, it was hell, but somehow that doesn't seem quite so important.

That's where I've wound up: in a kind of hazy forgetfulness. Surely managing wasn't all that bad. So, I'm thinking of making Georgetown a two-day ride next year. I'm even thinking of putting on a second, brand new ride, possibly in late April. I'm thinking... Well, I'm thinking, please, somebody slap me!!

From the Editor....

I hope this issue of The Leadline finds everyone doing well, staying warm and dry and surviving winter in fine fettle! Here in the far North, we have had a couple stretches of cold weather, which by California standards, are beyond imagination. The lows at my house have been -35 degrees. We sometimes have strong temperature inversions, which means that in town, which is lower elevation than my house, the low temps have been -45, and in some of the even lower areas, down to -50 or more. In between cold spells, we got buried in 1 ½ feet of snow! (The photo below was taken before the big snowstorm. At that time we had received considerably less than our normal snowfall amount).

My horses are all doing fine, with their thick, dense coats. I free feed hay in the extreme cold and they stay warm from internal combustion. And yes, I have a barn, but no, it's not heated, and no, I don't use blankets unless someone is shivering, which is seldom.

This issue includes the year-end point standings. There's also information on both the National Convention and the Region 1 Mini-

Convention, as well as a couple of articles that I hope you will find useful. If you have any suggestions for improving on the newsletter, or subjects you would like to see included, please contact me. Also, keep in mind that I'm always in the market for ride stories and pictures - lots and lots of pictures!

I will be attending the National Convention in Denver in February, and I hope to get to see many of you there. Should be a fun time, as every convention is! See you then!

Region 1 Mini-Convention! Back to the Livermore Wine Country! March 9, 2013

NATRC returns to the Bothwell Art Center in Livermore to celebrate the Region 1 mini-convention on Saturday March 9th 2013. Bring family and friends and enjoy the Livermore wine country.

We are privileged to have some great speakers, topics and vendors lined up. Penny Mars from EggQuestrian Parasite Testing Services will speak about the growing parasite resistance to wormers and how to deal with this. She will also bring equipment to demonstrate fecal testing. NATRC member Brynn Bollinger will speak about the benefits of restricted feeding. She'll demonstrate how to build a variety of feeders and will bring some examples. From UC Davis our guest speaker is Dr. Sarah le Jeune. Originally from Belgium, she received her veterinary degree at the University Of Liege, Belgium, in 1999. She completed her residency in Equine Surgery at UC Davis and has been a member of the UC Davis Equine Surgery faculty since 2003. Throughout her career she was interested in acupuncture and traditional Chinese medicine (TCVM). Dr. le Jeune was certified in veterinary acupuncture by Colorado State University and has integrated acupuncture and TCVM into her equine practice. Her topic will address the changes in veterinary medicine and the integration of alternative medicines into training programs. She will also discuss how you, as the animal owner, can best speak to your vet and incorporate alternative medicine into your current medical program. The last speaker is not confirmed yet, but will most likely be "Saddles that Fit". This is a mobile saddle fitting business. They have many saddles (sometimes loaning them out!) and they travel to do saddle fitting and teach riders what to look for and how to evaluate their saddles.

The vendors on board include a nature photographer, Le Neigh hand crafted gifts, pottery and gourd art, hand-crafted jewelry and an animal portrait artist. A tack store vendor is in the works and will be announced soon.

So things are shaping up. We have informative topics AND great shopping! One can never start too early for birthdays and next year's Christmas shopping! Even better, you're supporting your organization and sport!

To make this run smoothly, I need a few volunteers. This is too difficult for one person and I REALLY need a "few good men or women"! Besides it's fun, it's a wonderful donation of your time for a good cause and you get to work with great people!

Open Positions:

1) Need someone to take charge of the vendors on Friday afternoon (3 hours for set up) and on the day of convention. Includes organizing who goes where on the auditorium floor plan (don't worry, it's already drawn up), be there Saturday early to help the vendors get set up and answer questions and of course, make sure they get lunches and receive thank you cards from NATRC.

2) Need a volunteer to take charge of setting up the lunch buffet, manage the lines on Saturday and make sure all goes smoothly. This includes some Costco shopping to obtain the goods. I have suggestions and am willing to help you with this.

3) Need a creative volunteer(s) to make the table centerpieces for the Saturday awards dinner. There MUST be some creative souls in this organization, so please jump in! I have items from previous dinners so perhaps you can utilize some of these or use your imagination and create new ones.

4) Need help from all members to acquire donations. Remember, this is one of our major fundraisers for 2013. I need 1-2 people to keep track of donations, help solicit them, set them up at the convention, pick them up if needed and write the thank you cards to our supporters afterward. These donations for the silent auction and raffle support your year end awards banquet and the awards themselves. Please help.

So, there's lots of work to do. If 3-4 folks volunteer, then there won't be that much work for any one person. Having done this multiple times in the past, I will coordinate and help everyone and be the "go to" person.

Step up to the plate, friends, and help out. This is a good opportunity for a spouse or family member who does not want to attend the convention but would volunteer to help the day of the event. Those of you who've attended in the past know what an educational, fun and social day this is so pitch in and help the 2013 convention be even more successful and fun for all.

Stay tuned - more info to follow on the Region 1 website and in E-Blasts.

Award Sponsors Sought

Year-End awards are just around the corner with the 2013 Region 1 mini convention in Livermore coming up. Please consider supporting your region by sponsoring an Award. Your donations help R1 to continue giving high quality Year-End awards.

The cost to sponsor an award is:

$100 for a First place Horse or Horsemanship for each of the 7 classes (a total of 14 awards). These awards typically consist of a high quality blanket for the horse and a jacket for the rider, or something equivalent.

$65 for a Special Memorial award. These include: Bob Smith perpetual award (High Point First Year Novice/CP horse); Fran & Carol Duport Memorial award (High Point First Year Open horse); Pat Ersepke Memorial Award (High Point Novice Horse/Rider Combination); and the Max Barmettler Region 1 Lifetime Award (Outstanding service to Region 1).

$50 per class for ribbons, Horse or Horsemanship. A total of 14 ribbon sets. Classes available for sponsorship are:

Open Heavyweight
Open Lightweight
Open Junior
Novice Heavyweight
Novice Lightweight Novice Junior
Competitive Pleasure.

Any other donations in the amount of your choice will, of course, be gratefully accepted. You might even consider getting together with someone to sponsor a class or memorial award together. Contact Betty Young at 530-222-2978 or pbyoung@sunset.net for more information or to reserve a particular award. Mail your donations, specifying your first and second choice of awards that you wish to sponsor to: Phil Young, 2384 Templeton Drive, Redding, CA 96002.

Thank you in advance for your support of Region 1.

Rule Changes for 2013

Proposed rule changes are presented at the February NBOD meeting, wording is finalized at the July meeting, and voting occurs at the November NBOD meeting.

1. Section 2A.5.f. (page 2-2):

The rule read that to maintain sanctioned ride status, the ride must be listed in Hoof Print at least once. The approved change will read: A ride must be listed on the NATRC official web site (with the correct ride date) at least 60 days prior to the ride. This is simply more realistic as the Hoof Print is no longer printed often enough for the requirement to be practical.

2. Section 5 I.4. (page 5-3):

The rule stated that the trailmaster could designate a location on the trail as hazardous and instruct the riders to dismount and proceed on foot. The approved change will read that the ride chair or judges as well as the trailmaster can do so.

3. Section 10 B.2.a. (page 10-1):

Competitors in AK (Region 1A) can meet requirements for a National Championship within any consecutive three-year period.

4. Section 5 B.4. (page 5-1):

Another option has been added to the list of what ride chairs can offer. Portable panels that are securely anchored to the trailer or to a tree will be allowed. The option must be available to all, but not all have to use it.

Horses do not have to be stabled under identical conditions, and there is probably no competitive advantage of one method over another (stationary tied directly to the trailer, to an overhead tie apparatus, to a sliding tether, or loose in a portable panel corral).

As with any stabling option, the option to allow the use portable panels is at the discretion of the ride chair. The rider should choose what is best for their own horse. Horsemanship judges will continue to evaluate the safety aspects of any stabling option used.

GoodSearch & GoodShop

NATRC can receive one penny for each internet search using GoodSearch as the search engine. You wouldn't think that could add up to much, but it does. And you can shop using GoodShop, which includes all the big retailers, with up to 30% going to NATRC. Turn your search and shopping into dollars. If you haven't already, please consider going to www.GoodSearch.com and setting North American Trail Ride Conference-NATRC (Sedalia, CO) as your preferred charity.

Reminder for Ride Managers!

At the July National Board of Directors meeting, the Board voted to increase the member rider fee to $10 starting with the 2013 rides. The following items have been updated to reflect this change:

- Generic entry Form: If you use your own entry form, please update the member rider fee.
  - Fees & Stats Form
  - Ride Management System
- Please be sure to use the updated forms. The rider fee for non-members will remain at $20.

Get NATRC E-News

NATRC E-News is the official electronic communication channel of our organization. E-News is a subscriber-based electronic marketing software from Constant Contact.

With E-News, you can receive electronic announcements on upcoming NATRC rides and clinics, new sponsors and special offers, NATRC promotions and contests, and general NATRC information including details on rules changes and proposals as well as regional and national Board minutes in a timely manner by subscribing now.

To begin receiving NATRC E-News, simply go to the NATRC website (<http://www.natrc.org>), click on "Join/Renew" along the top, then select "Join NATRC E-News." After you are directed to the E-News sign-up page, you can choose to receive a variety of different types of announcements.

If you would like to send NATRC information to all subscribers or just specific regions, contact Bev Roberts (matefey@gmail.com) or the National office (natrc@natrc.org) for help to put your announcement on the official NATRC electronic communication channel.

Highlights From the National Board of Directors Meeting

November 10, 2012

Flexible Thinking:

During an informal session Friday evening, the NBOD discussed ways to make our sport more rider and ride management friendly. One major aspect to consider is flexibility – or apparent lack of - in our sport. It's not so much that our procedures and rules are rigid, but many of us have become rigid in our thinking. As long as something doesn't go against our rules or philosophies, it could benefit all of us to be more flexible in our thinking. This focus carried through the sessions on Saturday.

Finances:

- Thanks to strong financial leadership, the status at the end of the third quarter is strong with revenue slightly above budget, expenses slightly below, and a bottom line net gain. Special projects (sponsorships, raffle, national convention) spearheaded by a few, comprised a large portion of the revenue. (See complete financial reports in Hoof Print).
- A $5 increase (thus a $10 fee) per member rider fee for 2013 will help offset some of the pressure on special projects.
- Plans for Capital Campaign and Planned Giving programs are in the works.

Region 1 Measurements:

- Each Region sets goals as a method to measure growth. Region 1's goal for 2012 was to have as many members, rides and average number of riders per ride as in 2011. We actually gained a few members, gained a ride, and had a slight increase in the average number of riders per ride! Congratulate yourselves!
- THANK YOU if you're putting on a ride, riding in a ride, or volunteering at a ride. We can't do it without the volunteers.

Rule Changes for 2013:

See separate article.

Committee:

Natalie Goldberger, DVM, R4 was approved as a veterinary judge. Jerry Sims, R3, was approved as a horsemanship judge. The Judges Committee is making an effort to mentor apprentice horsemanship judges. Judging involves so much more than putting comments and scores on the scorecards.

Media Advisory:

The Fall Hoof Print has been posted on the website.
<http://www.natrc.org/hoofprint/HoofPrint.pdf>
For 2013, the print version will cost $15 for a subscription.

Ride Management:

All riders and volunteers were reminded to sign two liability releases: the rider or worker release AND the release for the particular state related to its EALA laws. Updated ride report forms to reflect the increase in rider fees are posted on the website.

Safety:

Finding and using qualified safety riders is a concern in all regions.

Raffle:

The current raffle offers a choice of three options for the winner: an Eli Miller handmade saddle, a custom camping package from Cabela's, or a 60' round pen from Tractor Supply. Tickets are available from all R1 BOD representatives or at www.natrc.org.

Drug Testing:

The drug testing committee tested seven rides in 2012 and a total of seventy horses. Jerry Weil, DVM was happy to report that no illegal substances were found and that it is a credit to our sport that we have so many responsible and honest members. The committee will spot test regions in 2013 and future years as a security check to insure our sport remains fair and the playing field remains level.

Marketing:

- Subscribers to E-News total 1,255 as a result of adding non-subscriber members to the list.
- The Summer Sponsor Series started in mid-June and concluded in mid-September.
- The Hoof Print electronic non-subscriber and print copy lists have been merged into the Electronic Subscriber list.
- NATRC shares links with 18 other horse magazines
- Webmaster, Bev Roberts has slowly been making changes, continuing to clean up code and files, and posting updates to the Ride Schedule, Ride Results, Standings and Sponsors as well as news items. Take a look for breaking news, updates, and general information at www.natrc.org.

Honorary and Appreciation:

The Jim Menefee Lifetime Membership Award has been renamed the Jim Menefee Lifetime Achievement Award.

National Convention 2013:

Denver, CO February 21-23. Watch www.natrc.org for details.

Future:

If you have some ideas how to have more rides, make it easier to put on rides, or get more riders to come to rides, please share with your R1 Board of Directors/ National Directors.

Portable Panels - A New Camping Option

By Susan Peters

In Ride Season 2013 ride managers will have another camping option to offer their competitors – the use of portable panels (several of our sponsors, offer portable panels). While many current riders will likely continue to use the containment methods that work well for their horses (tie to trailer, high ties, etc.), we expect some competitors and especially competitors new to NATRC to use portable panels. There are several key provisions to keep in mind:

- Ride managers have the discretion to allow portable panels or not allow portable panels at their particular ride. Good reasons to disallow them could include but not be limited to a space limitation or a landowner that requires a different containment method (example – some State Parks require that horses be kept in Park pens or tied to Park high ties).
- If ride managers choose to allow portable panels, they have the ability to specify a size limitation (example 12 feet by 12 feet or 13.1 diameter area per horse).
- In making the above decisions, ride managers need to be sure that all competitors COULD take advantage of portable panels if they chose to do so (the level playing field concept that is so important to NATRC).
- Portable panels – for safety reasons – need to be securely anchored – attached to a trailer or tree, for example.
- If a ride manager does allow portable panels, the ride manager should consult with their horsemanship judge on any special instructions for doing a stabling check. These instructions can be provided at ride check in or ride briefing.
- Electric fencing and staking out continue to be DISALLOWED.
- ALL RIDE MANAGERS should note in their ride descriptions whether portable panels are or are not allowed – and any other restrictions (size limitations for example).
- ALL RIDERS who plan to use portable panels should verify that they are allowed at the ride they will be attending. Check with the ride manager to see what stabling options are offered.

Historian: Kathy Nixon – No update

Wonder Workers: Steve Meroshnekoff – No update

Points/Membership: Jim Ferris – down slightly from 2011 with approximately 80 paid members.

Publicity: Linda Thomason – wrote to 27 horse organizations regarding breed awards and publication of 2013 Ride Calendar – received only 2 responses. Found 2 or 3 online services and Ride Magazine that will publish the Ride Calendar for free along with a small banner type ad on BAEN (Bay Area Equestrian Network).

Benefit Ride: Cowboy Camp – better than expected profit of $1904.00.

The Leadline: Phil Young – There are currently 25 print copies of the Leadline mailed via USPS. The print version is limited to 12 pages and costs approximately $1.50 to print and mail. The Leadline via email is an expanded version. Next publication date is 01 January 2013; all materials must be submitted no later than 15 December 2012. Laurie Knuutila is doing a GREAT JOB!

National BOD: Jamie Dieterich and Jim Ferris

Proposed rule changes for 2013:

1. Proposed rule change would reword Section 2 A.5.f. of the Rule Book to account for the fact that The Hoof Print is no longer published often enough for ride managers to abide by the present wording. R1 BOD – YES

2. To correct wording in Section 5 I.4 from "designated by the trailmaster as hazardous", to "designated by the trailmaster, ride manager, or judges as hazardous", as this is often presently done. R1 BOD – YES

3. For clarification purposes, Section 6 B.1.e would be changed from "P&R scoring will be" to "P&R procedures and scoring will be". THIS PROPOSED RULE CHANGE WAS DELETED BY THE NBOD DUE TO THE COMPLEXITY OF THE ISSUE.

4. Section 10 B.2.a would be changed from "within any three-year period" to "within any consecutive three-year period" to clarify that the three-year period must be three consecutive years. This change applies only to Region 1A (Alaska). R1 BOD – YES

5. Section 5 B.4 would be changed to define types of portable pens/corrals that are not acceptable stabling options, with the purpose of allowing the use of certain types of portable corrals/panels. The option of allowing portable pens/corrals would still be up to the Ride Manager. R1 BOD – YES, but we feel that it needs to be specified on the entry form for each ride whether or not portable corrals/panels will be allowed at that ride

6. Would change the wording of Section 6 B.1 to include the use of CRI (Cardiac Recovery Index) in the evaluation of condition, and to correct terminology (Myoglobinuria instead of azoturia). R1 BOD – YES with change of "CRI" to "cardiac recovery index (CRI)".

7. Proposed $5.00/rider increase in rider fees paid to National by ride managers. Although the R1 BOD voted against this change, it was approved by the NBOD. The National Raffle will be held in conjunction with the 2013 National Convention and includes a choice of 3 items each valued $1200.00.

Ride/Clinic Management: Jamie Dieterich – Need to look for winter clinic location with covered arena so clinic can be held indoors if weather is bad.

Outreach Coordinator: Linda Thomason – continue making up and handing out new rider bags

Trails Advocacy Coordinator: Judy Etheridge – No report.

Bylaws: Jim Ferris, Jamie Dieterich, Phil Young – started work on non-profit application. Jamie has a book on forming a corporation, specific to California, on order. Need articles of incorporation, including statement regarding disposition of assets upon dissolution of corporation. Need to apply for exempt status with the California Franchise Tax Board. Will try to get copy of Articles of Incorporation from National and R2.

Judging Issues: Jamie Dieterich, Betty Young – Judges need to be nicer to Novice and Junior riders. Judges' comments need to be kept private. If riders have complaints, they must be documented and submitted to the Judges Committee. See Rule book, "Letters of Concern".

OLD BUSINESS:

Convention 2013: Linda Thomason – the date and site are set (contract to be signed soon), working on speakers and vendors. Saturday 09 March 2013 at the Bothwell center in Livermore. Waiting for response from Dr. Ferraro/Dr. Sara Lejeune from UC Davis – topic of integrated veterinary medicine. Also Brynn Bollinger – how to feed horses. 2 vendors already lined up, will contact Long Riders Gear and Saddles That Fit. Need 100 plastic bags for convention packets – suggestions welcome.

R1 Corporate/Non-profit status: Phil Young – 501c3 application in progress.

NATRC Computers: Jim Ferris – no update.

Possible partnership with California State Horseman's Association Trail Program being investigated by Linda Thomason.

Subsidy of Ride awards – continue in 2013: All in favor but will make final determination at January meeting after end of year finances are posted.

NEW BUSINESS:

Elections: Angie will be going to NBOD to fill position being vacated by Jim Ferris. R1 BOD has two 3 year terms open and one 2 year term. Jim will not run again. Potential candidates for R1 BOD include Stephanie Swain, Gene Boicelli, Joe Pimentel and Lee Cannon. Need candidates' statements in December. 2013 will be Jamie's last year at NBOD – need to ask for nomination of candidates at Convention.

Year End Awards: Betty Young – budget is $1000–1200, but actual cost has been $1600–1800 in past few years. Needs suggestions for affordable awards.

NEXT MEETING:

Time: 10:00 a.m.

Date: Saturday, 12 January 2013

Location: via telecom - GoToMeeting

CLOSE OF MEETING:

Phil Young moved to adjourn the meeting; Gene Boicelli seconded. Meeting adjourned at 2:17 p.m.

Respectfully Submitted,
Stephanie Swain

You've heard the experts. They say we should encourage our horses to eat the way nature intended. That means, ideally, grazing or munching on grass hay off and on 'round the clock.

"Frequent, small meals are best for the digestive-tract anatomy," affirms Clair Thunes, PhD, of Summit Equine Nutrition (summit-equine.com). "Horses evolved to eat nearly constantly, and as a result, they're continually secreting hydrochloric acid into their stomachs. Saliva from chewing contains bicarbonate that buffers the acid. So a near-constant food source that requires a lot of chewing increases saliva, which helps reduce the risk of gastric ulcers."

Another benefit of slow feeding is that it gives horses something to do. This alleviates boredom, which in turn helps prevent or moderate unwanted behaviors such as cribbing, weaving and stall- or paddock-walking.

Then, too, horses that don't fast for long periods between feed times also are more relaxed overall, as they suffer less digestive discomfort and aren't obsessing over food during the time between feedings.

If your horse is at pasture, he's eating closer to the way nature intended and enjoying the benefits. But what if pasture isn't an option?

Enter slow-feed hay nets, also known as small-mesh nets. While a traditional hay net has mesh large enough for a horse to stick his muzzle in and get a big mouthful, slow-feed nets have mesh sizes typically between 1 3/8 inches to 1 5/8 inches. Such tiny openings necessitate nibble-feeding: The horse coaxes a stalk or two out with his lips, then grasps the stalks with his teeth and pulls them out with a quick, sideways motion that mimics the action of grazing.

Small-mesh hay nets slow a horse's eating and simulate the more natural grazing environment horses evolved to thrive in. Read the second "Don't" to find out about proper hay net installation.

"These nets can be helpful when you want to provide a more natural, healthful way for your horse to eat but you can't run out to feed every hour," observes Thunes.

If you decide to give slow feeding a try, here are some do's and don'ts for using a small-mesh hay net.

❖Do: Shop around to find the net that best suits your purposes. One good one is the Freedom Feeder® (freedomfeeder.com), pictured here. Non-net alternatives include the Slow Down® Hay Feeder/Soaker, which is a bucket with a restricted-access grille at the top (slowdownhayfeeder.com), and the Hayslow Feeder, a metal feeder with a net-like grille (hayslow.com).

❖Don't: Expect sharing; provide one hay net per head (plus perhaps one extra) for horses turned out together to prevent hoarding or bullying.

❖Do: Install the net according to the maker's instructions for safety and best results. Initially, fluff up the hay inside the net and pull some hay strands through a few of the holes to give your horse the idea.

❖Don't: Hang the net in any way that could enable your horse to catch a hoof in it. Especially if your horse wears shoes (which increases the risk of entanglement), make sure the net is high enough to minimize risk.

❖Do: Allow some time for your horse to learn how to use the net. Provide an extra serving of hay along with what's in the net for a day or two, so your horse is never learning how to use the net on an empty stomach.

5 Things A Horse Can Reveal About You In Under 5 Minutes

By Judy Askins, Equus Elemental
Reprinted with Permission

Horses are remarkable teachers because they have an honest, accurate, and uncanny ability to size people up instantly.

Because horses are prey animals, their very survival depends on their ability to detect and evaluate a predator's state of being.

When we interact with horses, their response to us is immediate, truthful, and non-judgmental. They are mirrors reflecting back to us the state of our energy and body language.

So, what can a horse tell about you in under five minutes?

1. Are you a good leader?
2. Are you honest?
3. Are you a good communicator?
4. Are you consistent?
5. Are you relaxed?

1. Leadership. Establishing leadership in a herd comes naturally to horses. The herd's safety depends upon it. If you do not exhibit good leadership qualities that the horse can identify, the horse will assume the leadership role out of necessity. But if you are a true leader, the horse will want to follow you and take direction from you out of trust and respect. Leading means allowing the horse to make mistakes, provided we also allow him the opportunity to learn from them. But the key in those moments is not to be judgmental about his choices; respectfully encourage and allow the horse to do the desirable thing. Imagine the freedom, confidence and curiosity you'd develop if every time you attempted something, you were supported and encouraged to keep trying, rather than criticized. Good leaders get amazing results, not only from their horses, but also from their spouses, children, family members, co-workers, and everyone they come in contact with.

2. Honesty. "Say what you mean; mean what you say." We must first be clear with ourselves and have a plan before we can clearly communicate our intention to the horse or to others in our lives. Honesty is how you develop trust in relationships. So, if you do not follow through and consistently mean what you say, your horse will think you are a liar. Horses will reflect your level of honesty in a number of ways, such as being hesitant, non-responsive or by trying to dominate you in your interactions. Being honest builds the trust necessary to have deep and meaningful relationships and interactions in our lives.

3. Communication. Good communication is a two way street. It is just as important to convey our thoughts and ideas clearly to the horse, as it is to be a good listener to what they are communicating. Most horses are used to being told what to do and how to do it. Imagine if that were the only way you were treated. Listening to your horse or to those in your life does not mean letting them "have their way." But unless you understand their feedback, you will not be able to determine the proper response to help them. Another essential element in good communication is listening without judgment. If you are asking the horse to do something and the horse tries, even if it is not the desired result, do not judge him for that. Remember that curiosity and willingness shows an absence of fear. These skills lead to deeper levels of understanding in all areas of your life including family, friends, professionally and in the world as a whole.

4. Consistency. This is a commitment to follow through until you are effective each and every time. Being inconsistent is a sure way to break down the trust in your relationships. How can I establish a relationship or a bond with you when I never know how you'll respond? Consistency is also an important safety factor. A pushy horse that attempts to dominate you, or is fearful and moves into your personal space without being invited, is an indication that you need to establish safe and healthy boundaries. Learning to be consistent when expressing what you want leads to increased personal clarity and better results in all areas of your life.

5. Relaxation. Would you like to spend more time relaxed in the present moment and still feel connectedness to your physical surroundings and the people with whom you have relationships? Horses live this way all the time and we can learn by their example. One of the ways a horse can tell if you are relaxed is by your breathing. Horses also observe and assess the amount of tension you are holding throughout your entire body. If you are tense and worried, the horse will reflect that by perhaps pacing or the inability to stand still. In many cases, when people find themselves getting mad or frustrated, if they stop, take a deep breath and relax, their horse will do the same almost immediately – as if they are saying: "Thanks, I needed that, and so did you!"

The unique gift the horse brings is their subtle and constant ability to reflect life changing information back to us so that we can improve ourselves by identifying our feelings, adjusting our thoughts, behaviors, and responses. If you are looking for a powerful and fun experience that will enhance your awareness of self and all of your relationships, then working with the horse as a teacher may be for you.
